The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE
I.—DELAWARE

TO DELAWARE falls the honor of being the first of the original thirteen states. December 7, 1787, it officially adopted the Constitution and thus was made a beginning of our present Federal government. According to the seventh article of the Constitution, however, it was necessary for nine states to ratify it before it actually came into force. So it was not until the following June, by which time eight other states had accepted the Constitution, that the United States of America actually came into being.

The early history of Delaware was a varied one. It started in 1638 when a small party of Swedes settled at the mouth of the Delaware river and called it New Sweden. In 1655, Peter Stuyvesant, the governor of the Dutch colony of New Netherlands, annexed this territory. But it did not long remain Dutch, for in 1664 the English took possession. When Pennsylvania was deeded to William Penn he desired access to the seacoast and at his urgent request Delaware was transferred to Penn's proprietorship. From the beginning of the eighteenth century, however, Delaware had its separate legislature, and at the time of the Revolution it became an independent state.

Delaware is next to the smallest of our states, having an area of only 2,370 square miles. Its participation in presidential elections is limited to three electors. This is arranged according to population. Each state is entitled to the same number of presidential electors as it has members of congress, so the influence of the different states in voting for the President varies from Delaware's three electors to New York's 45.

As to the derivation of the name Delaware, this was appropriately given to the state from the river, which in turn was named after the bay and the bay was called Delaware in honor of Lord Delaware, who was governor of the Virginia colony in 1610.

II.—PENNSYLVANIA

THE second state to adopt the Constitution was Pennsylvania. Its area of 45,126 square miles is larger than the combined New England states, except Maine, with New Jersey thrown in for good measure. Its name means "Penn's Woodland" and was so named by King Charles II, who granted this territory to the Quaker, William Penn, and named it in commemoration of Penn's father, who had been a distinguished admiral and on terms of peculiar friendship and intimacy with the royal family. This grant was made in lieu of £16,000, which the king owed Admiral Penn. On this basis it originally cost about $2 a square mile.

Pennsylvania has assumed such an important place among the states that it is often called the Keystone state. This term was probably derived originally because her name was carved on the keystone of the bridge over Rock creek, between Washington and Georgetown. Later on it was applied on account of the great importance of the state in national elections. Its delegation to congress totals 38, second only in size to that from New York, and Pennsylvania accordingly has 38 presidential electors.

William Penn first came over to America in 1682. The following year he laid out the city of Philadelphia, or "Brotherly Love," which was named after a biblical city in Asia Minor. As Pennsylvania was the only colony without a seacoast, Penn obtained from the duke of York the control of Delaware, and until the Revolution these two provinces were under the same proprietary government. Quarrels with Maryland over boundaries caused a formal survey to be made by two surveyors, Mason and Dixon, and it was this which became famous during the Civil War as the Mason and Dixon line, the dividing mark between the slave and the free states.

FOR CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

"How long will the South stand for this?" asked Dr. J. H. Reynolds, director general of the Christian Education Commission, commenting on the fact that statistics show the higher educational institutions of the South to be shamefully poor.

Dr. Reynolds said in part: "Of 60 colleges and universities in the United States having an endowment of $1,000,000 or more, only five are in the South, and one of the five is a Negro school, and only one belongs to the Southern Methodist Church. According to the World's Almanac, in 1920 $37,464,203 was contributed to Northern colleges and universities and only $250,000 to Southern institutions in gifts of $75,000 or above.

"Moreover, all of these gifts were by Northern people. Indeed the larger part of the wealth of the five Southern institutions having an endowment of a million, was contributed by people of the North. It is rather humiliating to be told that the endowment of the colleges and universities of Massachusetts alone exceed the endowments of all colleges and universities in the South, and to know that the eight Southern states of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina, Florida and Virginia, with almost forty times the area of Massachusetts and about four and a half times the population, have less wealth than the people of Massachusetts by $302,076,539. It seems to pay the people of Massachusetts to put money into education.

"But the South is not going to continue this neglect. Already throughout the whole section there is an awakened educational consciousness which is sure to express itself in an aggressive way. One can feel a mood of educational progress in the air and sense the determined purpose of a great and generous people to make immediate amends for past neglect and failure. The all important question is the kind of education that is to dominate in this period of development—what motives and ideals shall control it. Shall it be Christian or materialistic and pagan; shall the South remain true to evangelical Christianity or not? That is the issue.

"Leading evangelical denominations in the South have gone on record as claiming that the only complete education is Christian education, and that all education must be Christianized if America is to remain true to those principles of truth, justice and liberty upon which this nation was founded. In keeping with this expressed belief, various campaigns, looking to the strengthening of church schools have been launched.

"Southern Methodists have set for themselves as their task in the movement, the raising of $33,000,000 to be used in enlarging and improving their 91 educational institutions. This will be accomplished through the Christian Education Movement which was authorized by the general conference of 1918. This supreme authority of the Church directed that the entire force of the Church be focused upon this movement and that no other project be entertained until its task was accomplished. The movement is well under way and the outlook for all the objectives is very bright. The financial appeal will be made during the week of May 29-June 6 and there is every reason to hope that the amount asked for will be oversubscribed.

Southern Methodist Colleges and Universities which will participate in the Christian education movement are located as follows: Five in Alabama; four in Arkansas; one in California; two in Florida; nine in Georgia; seven in Kentucky; two in Louisiana; six in Mississippi; five in Missouri; eleven in North Carolina; one in Oregon; one in Oklahoma; seven in South Carolina; seven in Tennessee; thirteen in Texas; and ten in Virginia and West Virginia.
